This week James Beresh will briefly introduce the GlobalGiving Foundation, and then focus on one of their core values, 'Listen, Act, Learn. Repeat' by talking about some of the experiments they are running including Feedback Loops, identifying Effective organizations, and Optimizely.

James started working with GlobalGiving as a contractor in 2003 focused on the financial operations and back office systems. In 2012, he joined GlobalGiving full-time as their Controller. With nearly 20 years of accounting experience working with nonprofits and small business in manufacturing and retail, James has developed an expertise in creating efficient back office environments through extending the capabilities of commercial off-the-shelf applications. James was born, raised, and educated in the great city of Akron, Ohio until he decided to chase his now wife, Erin to D.C where he now lives with their wonderful daughter Ava.
